Correspondents Honor President's Appointees to High Federal Offices in National Capital.

United States Senate several days ago confirmed Maurice Splain as United marshal for the District of Columbia and Otto Praeger as postmaster for the city, but the real stamp of approval was jammed on the appointment of these two famous former journalists last night at the Shoreham, when more than sixty of their recent confreres of the Washington corps of correspondent were hosts at a supper in honor of the President's recent appointees to high federal offices in the National Capital. being journalists for the evening), and it may be that the accounts of the ceedings were twisted slightly after the supper broke up-some time this morning supper broke up—some time this morning. However, it is alleged that before dawn today one well known journalist was seen conversing with another well known ditto while waiting for the water to flow back into the Eastern Branch and thus start the Mount Pleasant car service, and one said to the other:

"Say, that supper was some supper."

"You're right. You've got to give Maurice and Otto credit for one thing. They certainly can take a joke."

Vacant Spaces in Menu Filled.

Maurice Splain sat on the right hand of Toastmaster Henry Hall, and Otto Praeger sat on the left, and down the long expanse of table they could see their friends with whom they have lived and worked and laughed for years. Di-their friends with whom they have lived and worked and laughed for years. Directly in a plumb line down the table sat Assistant Stage Manager Arthur B. Krock, who helped Toastmaster Hall in the adept handling of the several stunts which turned the supper into a political cabaret show. The early morning remark of the journalist, therefore, must be construed as meaning that the ordinarily vacant spaces in the menu were filled with wit and burlesque.

Hardly had the guests and hosts taken their places, when the dining room was disturbed ya terrific racket at one end. Toastmaster Hall, pained and surprised, asked for order, but a rough voice demanded to be admitted. After a short consultation between the aforementioned Assistant Stage Manager Krock and a man from a famous detective agency, it was agreed by Messrs. Hall and Krock that the disclosures of the detective should be turned loose upon the assemblage.

The detective had a dictagraph record, taken at the National Press Club on the day that the President appointed Mr. Splain to the office of United States marshal. It's a good thing there were no reporters present at the supper, because what the detective agency gathered in the way of remarks by the new United States marshal about the Senate, the United States courts and the marshalship, if printed in the ordinary manner of present-day journalism, would make the Benton case seem like something stale and cast off from the Daily House-keepers' Hints. Even Joe Tumulty (who is Joseph Tumulty; secretary to the President when on duty), looked aghast when he heard the dictagraph record of Maurice Splain saying:

"The only use I evey saw for a marshal was to ride at the head of a parade on a spavined horse."

Only the Soup Was Strained.

There might have been strained relations right there, had not a corps of handy walters turned it into strained gumbo. And then, too, at this juncture, Maj. A. J. Stofer sang "The Bully Song," and if it isn't a better song than some of these "Oh, You Kid" songs that are float-ing around now—then sixty-five newspa-per men are mistaken.

The same detective caught Otto Praeger

And he got a job for me.

Toastmaster Hall started to eulogize Maprice Splain with rare praise and a wonderful selection of English, but he was roughly and rudely interrupted in the middle of a sentence by Thomas F. Logan, who demanded that he should read a real eulogy. He insisted and was allowed to proceed, reading a pacan of praise for Mr. Splain and another for Mr. Praeger, It's too bad there were no reporters present, for the eulogies purported to be written by two unsuccessful aspirants for the marshalship and postmaster's office.

Burlesque on Civil Service.

Herndon Morsell turned the tide of sentiment from laughter to apprecia-tion of melody in an old song. "Genevieve," and following that Frank B. Lord, J. Fred Essary and Earl Godwin of the press gallery presented a burlesque civil service examination for the offices of assistant postmaster and deputy United States marshal, a portion of it being:
"Define the relationship between a

YOU CAN'T EARN MONEY WHEN YOU'RE LAID UP

There are a lot of people in this town who you feel that you can, but certainly some of you can't, for as soon as you are sick your wages stop and worry and debts begin to pile up. The sensible thing for you to do, as soon as you feel run-down and worn out, no matter what the cause, is to take something just as quick as you can to bulld up strength and health. Make yourself more comfortable and provide against serious sickness, We don't believe there is any other medi

It is a medicine that gets, right at the trouble and relieves it by toning the nerves, euriching the blood and giving new strength and health to the whole body. It doesn't do this by means of alcohol or habit-forming drugs, because it contains none. Its strength and health-giving power is due to pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites, long indorsed by successful physicians, the one for its food value, the other for its tonic value. Here, for the first time, they are combined, and the result is a real nerve, blood and body building medicine—a real strengthener that we are proud to tell you about. You don't need to besitate in using it, because if it doesn't do all we say it will and satisfy you in every way, it will cost you nothing. If it doesn't make you strong and well again, come back and get your money. It will be given to you without word or question. "What is the greatest achievement of the present administration?"

"The discovery of Tom Pence."

"Why did the appointment lightning strike so heavily in the case of Praeger and Splain?"

"They were the only democrats in the city who had not raised a lightning rod."

And a lot more of the same kind.

At great expense, the press galiery had dug up the early career of Maurice Spaln—who comes near to being the dean of the corps for all his Youthful appearance—and in mock moving pictures by Berryman, with a travelogue by John Kirby, the new marshal was seen getting a journalistic scoop on the signing of the Declaration of Independence; an interview with Andrew Jackson, and he was also seen standing beside the President at the grand review of the troops after the war.

"That is some parade. Maurice," the President is alleged to have said, according to Travelogue Manager Kirby.

Honor Guests Make Speeches.

Honor Guests Make Speeches. The two guests of honor made speeches as did Commissioner Newman, who was one of the four newspaper men to be appointed to office by the President, and Tommy Brahany told two of his inimitable irish yarns, and then Ira Bennet read a poem, written after the manner of a poet laureate—perhaps the like of it has never been printed in coid type before:

Otto Praeger and Maurice Splain.
Strong of heart and great of brain!
All our hearts repeat the chorus.
Hurah for Otto and for Maurice.
Three cheers for Maurice and for Otto.
Hand it to 'em. for you've got to!
Our great and bonored President
Acted wisely when he went
To the ranks of journalism
And thus oscaped all criticism
When he filled these mighty Johs
With black sheep grafters instead of slobs.
Burleson and McReynolds, too,
Brave and statesmanlike, these two,
Knew exactly what to do:
One chose Otto and one Maurice—
Let us keep their manes before us.
Not forgetting in our gies
To drink a toast to Tumuity.
We hate to say it, but we've got to,
Otto ought to have an sato:
But it's not so bad for Maurice,
For he has—be bas a hawriss.
Now, all together, drink a toast
While these glorious things we boust:
Sle Semper Anacestia,
Divat Alexandria;
Tempus fugit, babeas corpus;
Oyez—oyez, the Postorfis!
To fill out the verse and not be partial,
Corpus delicti, God save the murshal!

The outery really grose through the streng remarks of a coroner in London. Holding an inquest on a man who had only two teeth and died because he could not chew his food, the coroner suggested that it would be much better if millionaires, instead of giving money for free libraries and universities, did something for poor people who have had teeth.

"I think if would be a most useful thing," declared F. Atkins, the secretary of the British Dental Association. There is no wholesale provision made for dealing with the teeth of the poor, and it is, of course, a great problem. The most suitable recipients in the first instance, of any large donations of the kind, would be the landing dentar haspitals of London and the provinces. that northeast Ulster will be included in the Irish parliament from its inception, but with the right to withdraw from it by a plebiscite in five years.

Should the opposition reject the above offer, the Daily Chronicle says, the government will proceed with the bill on its present lines.
